1. On 18 Jan 1967 Subject visited Source at her home in the early afternoon and together with Eve(all three)went afterwards to "Top Sixties". In the evening they went to an Ice show at Madison Square Garden and also had tea at the "Russian Tea Room". Source deliberately stuck to small talk only and avoided political topics. Subject seemed to be somewhat surprised by that and once or twice tried to touch on some politics on her own. First she mentioned that shortly before her arrival to the States she finally was introduced to KOLOSSOVA Kateryna , head of the Society for Cultural Contacts with Foreign Countries , and said something to the effect that she was quite impressed by her. At another point she mentioned again something about Kolossova but Source did not respond. They talked mostly about fashions, children, family life also.

2. According to Subject, she hoped their children will come to the States in summer 1967. As the matters stood now it was certain there won't be any obstacles anymore. They have already deposited Rubel 1,500.- in Kiev for that purpose.

Subject's husband has much improved in English but ~~she~~ herself did just the opposite. Her English was getting worse because she had little practice.

3. According to Source ,the conversation on the whole was rather uninteresting and dull. Source discovered that Subject was very observant and well trained. Thus, for instance, entering the Madison Square Garden, she at once compared it with the Sport Palace in Kiev and figured out how many seats it could have. She also led Source to the "adison Square Garden^{from their car} and seemed to be very well orianted in New York.

Sourd also discovered that Subject was very fond of comedies and had a rather simple superficial taste in ~~amusing~~ entertainment.
